

Dear Distinguished Alumni,

I am nominating Dr. Deborah Charfoos, WSU class of 1989 for this year's Distinguished Alumni Award.

She has been practicing Obstetrics/Gynecology in the Detroit area since her graduation. For the past 2 years she has used her education/training to help the people of Detroit. She has been my wife for 26 years but she is much much more..

She is a board member of Detroit2Nepal.org which is a non-profit helping to empower Detroit communities. Through D2N she has become involved in different organizations. She hosts a radio show on WNUC, Detroit community radio. It is titled Dr.'s making a house call and she interviews other healthcare professionals each week. The purpose of the show is to reach and educate those in the community who have no access to healthcare information.

She also runs the gynecology clinic at SAY Detroit health center in Highland park. She has been instrumental in bringing free contraception as well as other gynecologic related treatment to uninsured women.

Below are links describing her humanitarian contributions to Detroit.

Dr. Deborah Charfoos of Bloomfield Hills spreads the word on clean eating and how it helped alleviate her arthritis, diabetes and more.

By Ed Nakfoor

What a difference a year makes. So says Dr. Deborah Charfoos of Bloomfield Hills.

Dr. Deborah

Charfoos

Also about a year ago, Charfoos began reaching a wider audience with her Dr. Debbie's Wellness social media platform, where she offers advice about clean eating and eliminating chemicals and additives found in many foods, and household and personal care products found in our kitchens and bathrooms.

Charfoos' mission isn't limited to her office hours or her Facebook page. You'll find her living well and sharing advice about wellness throughout Metro Detroit, mostly through the Detroit to Nepal
